Queensland's remaining and Wildlife Habitats in peril

We need to keep our tree clearing laws! In the past twelve months we have seen an unprecedented attack on the laws that have been put in place over 3 decades of hard work and with the strong support of the community. Now – unbelievably – the laws that finally brought an end to the clearing and devastation of Queensland's endangered regrowth forests, bushland and riverine vegetation are under being torn up! This is despite Campbell Newman promise not to remove these protections! An estimated 700,000ha of endangered or ecologically important forests could be destroyed forever if changes to the vegetation clearing laws currently being rushed through by the state government are passed. Now is the time to speak out! We know from public and private statements that the Queensland Government is already worried about a backlash. PLEASE HELP! Call your local Queensland State MP today to;

- Let them know you are dismayed about opening up 100,000s of hectares of endangered and ecologically important forests and bushland for clearing - including known habitat for koalas, cassowaries, mahogany gliders and hundreds of other threatened species.
- Ask them for the evidence behind Minister Cripps claim that conservation groups have lied.
